Leaders: The Threat

1. The DCI plans to submit an unclassified article for Leaders magazine, July 1983. I pulled together a first draft drawing from the World Wide Briefing (introduction and wrap-up) and added examples drawn from the testimonies of the NIOs and other DDI personnel.

2. Please review the attached draft to determine if the parts relevant to your expertise can go out unclassified. Make changes or deletions you believe necessary. Until that has been done, I am treating this draft as a secret document. You are also invited to add unclassified material to fill any voids you identify.

3. Please return this draft with your suggested changes by noon Thursday, 3 March 1983.

LEADERS

18 February 1983

Honorable William Casey
Director
The Central Intelligence Agency
Washington, D.C. 20505

Dear Bill:

I've just received the enclosed note from President Reagan which will be the introduction to our special section "In Defense of the World" which will be published in July.

As I wrote to you before, The White House and the Defense Department suggested the enclosed list of authors. We are doing this with the close cooperation of The White House and the Defense Department because of our large readership on the Hill and because we all believe in a strong defense for the nation.

I remember when I first invited you to join my Board at the Library of Presidential Papers, and, as you know, we have a great many mutual friends.

Because of the importance of this issue, I would like very much to once again suggest that we have some words from you which we would like to include in this July issue. Your communications staff has called my Managing Editor to say that you do not normally do this type of thing because of the nature of your post. You and I both know that one does what one wants, and your predecessors have written articles on numerous occasions in general and occasionally for newspapers and magazines which I own.

I'm not asking you to disclose any secrets but I do think this should be an exception.

If you feel that clearance from The White House is necessary, please let me know and I will ask the President to approve, although I think that is already tacit in the suggestion of you as an author and in what he has written in his enclosed message.

I would appreciate very much your reconsideration and I look forward to hearing from you.

Cordially yours,

A handwritten signature in dark ink, appearing to read 'H. Dörmann', is written over a vertical line that extends from the 'Cordially yours,' text.

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

December 14, 1982

In a world threatened by totalitarianism and tested by terrorism, few developments could prove more ominous for the security, peace, and freedom of this nation than ignoring or rationalizing the dangers that confront us. We cannot build a secure future on misinformation, weakness, or the abdication of our leadership responsibilities. It is essential for us to assess the global situation realistically, giving careful consideration to the profound changes that have taken place in the international environment and the military balance of power over the past several decades. By achieving a clear understanding of the challenges before us, America can be confident of maintaining an unshakable consensus for the provision of adequate defenses to maintain our freedom, independence, and security in this precarious period of world history.

I am grateful to the editors and authors of this volume of Leaders. Because of the contributions you are making, your readership will better recognize and understand world developments and their significance for our country.

Congratulations on this most worthwhile and important effort.

Ronald Reagan

Mr. William Casey

Dear Bill:

After the publication of this enclosed issue with President Reagan's exclusive article and the section on the Navy, The White House expressed an interest that LEADERS Magazine ought to publish a major report, "In Defense of the World," which would give an overview regarding the importance of a strong defense in order to keep the peace.

In many areas, the press has not made great efforts to bring a fuller understanding to the public in this regard, and it was felt that perhaps we could tell the true side of the story.

Many of the public in various nations do not understand that defense expenditures also keep people working in defense industries and add to the economies of the nations.

Enclosed is a list of those who will be writing for this special report which will be published in our July issue.

We would like very much to extend an invitation to you to be a part of this "In Defense of the World" report. The article would be short, 1,500 words, should you be kind enough to agree and it should deal with the topic, "The Threat."

If this special report is done well, I believe it can do immeasurable good towards the understanding of a strong defense throughout the west and throughout the world itself.

I'll look forward to your kind thoughts.
